

Nova Southeastern University College of Osteopathic Medicine
CHAIR, DEPARTMENT OF FAMILY MEDICINE

Nova Southeastern University College of Osteopathic Medicine (NSU-COM), which has established itself as a leader in medical education and innovation since its inception in 1979, is seeking a chair for its Department of Family Medicine. The appropriate candidate for this challenging full-time position should be an innovative leader who can assume accountability for the clinical, academic, and administrative affairs of the department. Excellent interpersonal skills, significant clinical practice experience, capability for licensure in the state of Florida, administrative experience, and evidence of teaching research or other academic proficiency are additional attributes that might highly qualify a candidate for this position.

Competitive salary and an excellent benefit program are offered for all positions. Interested persons should forward their curriculum vita with cover letter, as well as three letters of reference to:

Lawrence E. Jacobson, D.O., Vice Dean, NSU College of Osteopathic
Medicine, Suite 1401/Terry Building, 3200 South University Drive, Fort Lauderdale, FL 33328-2018.

Phone: (954) 262-1772 Fax: (954) 262-2250

Email: *ljacobos@nova.edu

NSU-COM is currently ranked as the 11th largest medical school and the 4th largest osteopathic medical school in the nation. NSU is the largest independent not-for-profit institution of higher education in the Southeast and the 6th largest nationally. For more information about NSU's College of Osteopathic Medicine, please visit <http://medicine.nova.edu>.

NSU is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer.